Self - Esteem Boost Month

The Self-Esteem Boost Month is annually observed in February. During this period, the emphasis is on helping individuals to increase their belief in themselves and to develop a greater appreciation for themselves, regardless of the challenges they may face. Self-esteem refers to the value and perception we have of ourselves, which can be challenging to modify. Having a high level of self-esteem can help prevent various problems, such as mental health disorders, and promote good overall health and well-being. It can also enable us to be a valuable source of support and assistance to others. Since our mental health is as vital as our physical health, we should take advantage of this month of observation to care for ourselves and learn to love ourselves more.
